Speaker Promises Legislature Will Enact Law to Curb Extortionists

A promise to the people that the Legislature will stand ready to enact any sound law that may be proposed to curb profiteering and to punish the profiteers was made by Speaker Joseph E. Warner of the House at the opening of the 141st annual session of the Legislature today.

Speaker Warner's promise was made in a single but significant sentence. He said:

"The activities and usurpation of our commission on the necessities of life have been indeed of exceedingly great help, yet the State certainly stands ready, if the law is inadequate, to grant every legislative means to suppress and repress the inordinate and extortionate profiteer."

TO CONSERVE WATER POWER.
Speaker Warner's "inaugural" message, read to the House upon his reelection as speaker, also announced a stern note of warning against the profiteer combination that has sprung up in this and other States to seize the water power of all New England after recommending the development of the water resources. Speaker Warner said:

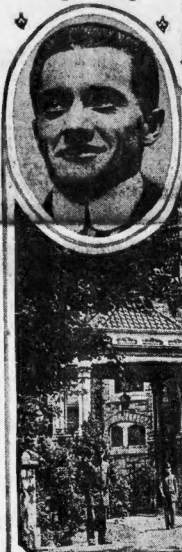

"In the meantime, we should, to be sure, be careful to guard against the development of the water power of all New England after recommending the development of the water resources. Speaker Warner said:

LIVE FOR BOSTON GIRL AND LUKY THE FAIR

FOR 1916 CHECKS

Francis K. McKenna Flees Exclusive Connecticut School to Enjoy 'High Life' Here

Love for a Boston schoolgirl and the desire to live the life of a young millionaire was the lure responsible for the downfall of Francis K. McKenna, nineteen, who claims to be the son of a wealthy Chicago army major and who is held here on the charge of passing $4,000 in worthless checks.

Young McKenna, when arraigned in Central Court before Judge Sullivan, admitted that he had run away from an exclusive preparatory school at Milford, Ct., and that he had had a brief time in New Haven before coming to Boston. He was charged in seven counts with continuing to cash checks and his case continued until Friday for disposition.

The youth, who was dressed in the height of fashion, refused to divulge the name of the young woman responsible for his trip to this city. He said that he met her at a school dance and that he was in love with the girl and inferred that he would try to marry her.

Since his arrival here, investigation disclosed that the boy has been living at the best hotels and leading a life that would befit a millionaire. McKenna, when pressed for information concerning himself, refused to give any experiences since he "left" school, he was particularly reticent and refused to make any comment aside from admitting the police that his parents were wealthy and that his present difficulty would be speedily adjudicated.

When taken in custody by Inspectors Finn and Flaherty, shortly after he had signed an examiner's copy of some of the "Cotton Blossoms" he was wearing a valuable fur coat, the value of which the police estimated at $200.

During examination at police headquarters the boy asserted that he had been in the city for some time and had been passing checks on the Commercial Trust Company of Philadelphia. After a long-drawn-out telephone conversation with the bank officials he found that because he is a minor the transfer could not take place without the assent of his parent.

McKenna said his father served throughout the war as a major in the army. He said he was in the reserve corps. The boy stated again that he was in the city for some time and that a speedy settlement would be made.

Attorney William J. Lewis, former assistant United States district attorney, has been retained by McKenna as counsel.

'Culinary Queen' Has Driven Hired Girl From Boston Throne

Introducing "The servant girl do lux."

Gone, but not forgotten, is the lanky "hired girl" who used to cook corned beef and cabbage for a whole farm of men folks at $1.50 per week and "glad to get it." And gone also is the "mother's helper," who stormed through the week from Monday washing to Saturday night pork and beans, for $3 and extra pie for the policeman.

Why talk about high wages for munition workers when right here in Boston kitchen "queens" are receiving from ten to twenty-five dollars a week with board and room, a private bath and extra service for large dinners and so care of the children?

That is exactly the situation. Various employment agencies divulge the "back-back" for a maid for general housework, and it's very general housework at that. No laundry, no heavy cleaning, extra service for large dinners and so care of the children.

Then there is the cook who draws from twelve to twenty-five dollars and the second maid who will guarantee to do all the housework for you for but nine dollars a week.

And if you are a family man and wife and children—they will be contented to eat the food that the "hired girl" has prepared for you.

INSANITY PLEA FOR KAISER REJECTED

Allies Won't Stand for an International Thaw Case in War Lord's Trial

By International News Service.
London, Jan. 7.—Any attempt by the ex-Kaiser's supporters to make an international thaw trial of his case will merely result in the allies forcing their hands.

"If after the demand for extradition is made it is claimed that the former German Emperor is mentally sound, this claim will have to be made formally before the allies will take cognizance of it," declared Sir Frederick Pollock today. Sir Frederick is one of the foremost international law experts in Great Britain. He is a member of the King's privy council and drew up the original draft of the indictment against William II.

WOULD SELECT ALIENISTS.
Sir Frederick continued: "The allies, made by German royalties, then the allies, proceeding under the law, will be prepared to select a body of internationally famous experts to examine the ex-Kaiser. Their report would be made to the supreme council at Paris, and this body would determine whether he is mentally fit for trial."

"But this would not free him from the charges made against him in the indictment. There would be nothing to show that he was not sane in 1914, when the war broke out. Some of the acts charged up against William were committed in that year."

"True, William could not be tried while mentally deranged, but the charges against a man who was sane in 1914 would stand. A fresh demand for his trial could be made at any time in the future when he might be declared sane."

SIR FREDERICK emphasized the fact that the allies are determined to punish the ex-Kaiser, and it was reported today on reliable authority that some big move in the plans for the trial is pending.

ALLEGED MENTAL EVILATIONS.
The question of the "insanity plea" arose from reports sent out of The Hague and Amsterdam that William was mentally and physically unwell. German royalties were said to be making a determined effort to prove that he is insane and not fit to stand trial.

International tribunal. This was in line with previous reports that William is suffering from hallucinations; that he breaks off in the middle of conversations and utters comments under the delusion that he is leading armies in the field; that he is haggard and given to fits of trembling.

However the allies are said to be in receipt of information from Holland through official channels that William is well and that "he is just as sane now as he was in 1914."

Sir Frederick Pollock pointed out to his colleagues, who are preparing the case against the erstwhile war lord, that the mere assertion of insanity is not a defence under the law nor has it any place in the indictment. The claim of insanity must be made formally and then proved beyond all doubt.

N. Y. Plans 'Wild' Wake on Jan. 15 for Old John Barleycorn

New York, Jan. 7.—Preparations for holding a wake on January 15 for "the end of the world," scheduled for January 15, so far as the belligerent population is concerned, are already afoot among owners of New York hotels and saloons. Indications point to a revelry that will eclipse any of the old-time New Year celebrations.

Table reservations were offered today at $15 and upward for diners at which diverse forms of amusement are to be offered. Patrons will be expected, for the most part, to bring their own liquid refreshment "on the hip," but some of the places, it was whispered, proposed to dispense of their remaining stocks of wine and liquors which will then be no longer salable, by giving it to their patrons the night of the wake.

Seating room on incoming New York trains is expected to be at a premium on January 15.

FARMER-LABOR ROAD STIRS WASHINGTON

Railroad Brotherhood Chiefs

Enter New Combine for

Co-operation

By International News Service.
Washington, Jan. 7.—The all-American farmer-labor co-operative commission was introduced to Washington today and gave cold shudders to some of the leading politicians. There had been talk of a powerful combine between the farmers and labor leaders, but the announcement today of the formation of such a group by C. H. Gustafson caused consternation among those who are already attempting to predict the way the vote will fall in 1920. According to the announcement made by Gustafson the commission "will conduct a vigorous campaign for direct dealing between farm producers and city consumers and as soon as feasible between city producers and farm consumers."

STONE GENERAL SECRETARY.

This flat announcement, however, did not satisfy when political leaders looked at the list of officials of the new organization, which includes C. H. Gustafson, president of the Nebraska Farmer Union; Warren S. Stone, chief of the railroad Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as general treasurer, and O. H. McGill, general secretary. Other officers include J. B. Sheppard, chief of the Railway Conductors; Herbert F. Baker, president of the Farmers' National Council; J. W. Kline, president of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths; E. O. Y. Ames, president of the Pacific Coast Railway League; J. M. Anderson, president of the Equity Co-operative Exchange; Thomas McDonald, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor; Allen Barker, head of the Railroad Brotherhood of Maintenance of Ways and Railway Shop Laborers; and Bert M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employees department of the American Federation of Labor.

MAY BACK PLUM PLAN.

The fact that Warren S. Stone holds a high office in the new combine gave immediate rise to a report that the new commission will carry on a campaign to make the Plumb plan and other proposals of labor an issue in the Presidential election.

The formal statement of purposes of the commission was as follows: "The all-American farmer-labor co-operative commission is a commission to co-ordinate and encourage co-operative efforts between and among organized producers and consumers and to unify action in stimulating production and profiteering in the necessities of life; to develop intelligence, mutual understanding and good will."

That statement was sufficient for the party leaders, who interpreted it as the first step in a great drive by farmers and laborers to make themselves felt in politics.

PRIMA DONNA ARRESTED TO BE DEPORTED

She Accuses Baklanoff, Bartons, of Misconduct; Both Are Out on Bail

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Miss Elvira Amara, the beautiful soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera company, who caused the arrest of George Baklanoff, the baritone, on a deportation warrant, was herself arrested on a similar warrant today.

The soprano caused the baritone's arrest by complaining to Federal authorities that he had taken her on tours about the country, posing as a single man, when in reality he had a wife and children in Russia. The Federal authorities, however, issued two warrants instead of one, and both are facing deportation on charges of misconduct. Both are at liberty on bail.

Baklanoff attributed his trouble here to jealousy.

"That woman," he said, "is so jealous of me you wouldn't believe it. She gets jealous at everything—chairs, walls, bureau, everything. You wouldn't believe it how jealous that woman is. She loves me. She has proposed to me."

"But how can I?" he asked. "I write to Russia, but no answer do I get. I don't know whether I'm married or not. I did not bring Miss Amara to Chicago. I come to sing for the Boston Grand Opera Company alone. When that—that you say, bust up—I come to Chicago."

Baklanoff was arrested on a deportation warrant signed by Secretary of Labor Wilson, charging immorality with the prima donna. All the information contained in the warrant was furnished by the songbird herself.

But this is the second time she has had her name coupled with Baklanoff's. Some time ago she and him were arrested while traveling with the opera company and the case was settled out of court.

The more recent charges preferred against Baklanoff are serious. The prima donna has unveiled her past completely in her attempt to get revenge on the sweetheart she has discarded her.

She declares that Baklanoff brought her to this country from Russia, primarily to sing, but with the understanding that he loved her and would marry her.

They traveled about together, and he promised to marry her. Then she says she discovered that he had a wife living in Russia.

With the provocation of "the woman scorned," Miss Amara sought revenge, and her knowledge of the law suggested that her relations with the much-maligned baritone constituted her sharpest weapon.

In the suit of some time ago, based on the alleged assault, Miss Amara not only charged him with beating her, but made a bitter attack on him as a shaker who sought the pleasant path of an opera idol in America to escape military service in his homeland.

FEDERAL TRADE BOARD TO BE INVESTIGATED

Washington, Jan. 7.—Appointment of a sub-committee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate the Federal Trade Commission was authorized at a special meeting of the committee today. The investigation will go into alleged activity or extrajurisdiction in the committee's affairs. A resolution introduced by Senator Watson, Republican, and passed by the Senate, ordered the investigation.

TAILOR GETS 4 MONTHS FOR STRIKING GIRL

Max Foster, a Charlestown tailor, was sentenced to four months in jail by Judge Sullivan in the Charlestown Court today for striking unemployed Anna Tippling. The girl charges that he laid hands on her when she went to the shop to get her father's clothes.

WIFE DIES AS FAMILY IS RENTED

Husband, After Waiting Seven Years, Loses Helpmate in Two Hours

After waiting seven years to be united with his family, Israel Mirsky, a well known commission agent in the flower exchange on Fifth street, became a widower two hours after Mrs. Mirsky and their three children arrived in New York by the French liner La Touraine. News of the tragedy of the war came across over the flower exchange, where Mirsky was well known.

With a comfortable apartment fitted out for his family on Beaver street near Franklin Park, for the past three months, Mirsky, after long correspondence by letter and when, went to New York to meet his wife, only to be met by the sad event of her death. Mirsky, who has two uncles in the fruit business—Fleisher, on Copley square, and Robert Koppelman of Providence, R. I.—came to this country about seven years ago.

He was a clerk in Poland when he married and the parents of his bride objected to the match which resulted in his emigration to America to make a home here for his family. Being well educated and able to speak English, Mirsky made good from the start.

The outbreak of the war defeated every effort to bring the wife and children here, and in the later stages of the conflict their home was sacked by Russian soldiers, as was the home of Mirsky's parents. Letters written to the Polish ambassador, to Secretary of State Lansing, the American minister in Poland and the Zion Society resulted finally in the mother and children reaching France several months ago.

Railroad employees had to be bribed to get the family out of Poland, as none but soldiers or officials, agents in remote countries, made it difficult for the woman to emigrate. Finally, a cable reached Boston a few days ago, whereby Mirsky, in New York, only to leave his wife die in his arms about ship two hours after her arrival.

Mirsky, according to friends on the flower exchange, sent many hundreds of dollars to Poland, but the greater part of this never reached his family. A telegram from New York said the three children are well.

My Word! Theatre to Invade Exclusive Fifth Avenue

New York, Jan. 7.—Fifth avenue most exclusive residential section is to be invaded by a theatre and a huge office building. Announcement was made that a $2,500,000 structure of thirty stories is to be erected by August Heckscher and other millionaires on the site formerly occupied by the late William C. Whitney as his home, at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street. Carolines Vanderbilt's home is diagonally opposite, while the old Collis P. Huntington estate is across the way.

The theatre will be the finest in the United States, and the structure will be calculated to improve and out to mark the best corner of the finest street in the world, said George Bue of the George Bue Construction Company, which is to erect the huge building.

ASKS LAW TO KEEP TAUNTON RIVER CLEAN

A bill authorizing the State Department of Health to prohibit the discharge of sewage and other substances deemed to be injurious to health into the Taunton River was filed with the Legislature by the department today, following its long study of river pollution. A penalty of $100 would be imposed upon every violator.

The government asks that attention be drawn to the plainer, more substantial goods.

COMPERS DENIES FRICTION WITH A. F. OF L.

Labor Leader, in Boston Today, Is Silent on Police Strike and the Union

Samuel Compers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who came to Boston to address the Chamber of Commerce, conferred today with local labor leaders and visited two sisters who live here—Mrs. Bella Isaacs and Mrs. Mattie Isaacs. Subjected to a cross fire of questions by reporters, he denied that friction was developing between him and subordinate leaders regarding the return of the railroads to private ownership.

He particularly denied that disagreement had arisen between himself and Warren Stone, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, on the question.

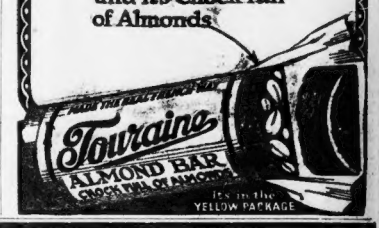

This friction was reported to have developed when Mr. Compers, as head of organized labor, refused to endorse the Plumb plan, to which the railroad unions are committed.

The address to the Boston Chamber of Commerce will be given at their luncheon Thursday noon in the Copple-Hill Hotel. The use to the Quincy Chamber will be given Thursday night.

The next industrial conference was a success in that it showed the change of the participants, the labor leader declared. It also showed, he said, where concessions must be made. Mr. Compers declined to make any statement about the arrest of radicals by the Department of Justice. He was equally reticent about police unions and Boston's new police force.

Frank McCarthy, local labor organizer, was one of the first callers on Mr. Compers in his room at the Touraine. Later the president of the A. F. of L. was scheduled for a conference with James Duggan of Quincy, first vice-president of the federation.

Tonight a banquet will be given at the City Club in honor of Mr. Compers by the Building Trade Contractors and the Building Trades Council.

Declares Frazee Has Done More
↳ Hurt Baseball in Boston
 Than Any Other M...

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—If Harry H. Frazee, president of the Red Cross committee, directed the Red Sox, is reacting easily it is because of the distance between here and Boston. When told of Frazee's Boston denunciation "Babe" Ruth came back with a torrid statement on the Boston club president which left little to the imagination. Babe spoke as follows:

"Frasen is not good enough to own any ball club, especially one in Boston. It is not necessary for me to say that he is unapproachable for that."

pay for their wives. I paid for Mrs. Ruth. After the game I was called to his office, where he handed me a cigar and thanked me. This is a fine sample of his liberality. "Because I demanded a big increase in salary, which I felt I was entitled to, he brands me as an ingrate and a trouble maker. The time of a hell-player is short, and he must get his money in a few years or lose out. Any fair-minded fan knows that my efforts on the Boston club last season warranted a larger salary, and I to make the club win. I don't like to play for Frazer, and I doubt if any ball player does, but that didn't keep me from giving my best. If my playing last year did not merit a $25,000 then it never will and I would go along in a rut.

IRAIKES BOSTON FANS.

"I like Boston and the Boston fans. I like the baseball populace of Boston, but just now the Ruth affair makes any former matter merely an incident."

They have treated me splendidly, and if it were not for France I would be content to play with the Red Sox to the end of my baseball days. Boston seems more or less like my home town, and with a regular man at the head of the club I would prefer to remain there.

"Frazee sold me because he was was officially spread that Battering Babe had agreed to sign with the Yankees. The faint hope that he might refuse, and so revert back to Boston, has been dispelled.

JUST WO

Just now the fans are saying that if the Nox had a "one man" team last season, they will not even have that in 1930. It's hard to make them swallow harsh criticism of the bird

"I will be in Boston soon and I will see the members of the press and the people of Boston right on this whole affair."

GLAD TO QUIT FRAZER.
Ruth further stated that with Frazer at the head of the Boston club he is only too glad to get away rius he is only too anxious to get away from the Red Box. As long as he was to be sold he preferred going to the New York Americans, and he plans to give the Gotham fans his greatest season of baseball, the Summer

At present Ruth is playing golf every day, taking long hikes over the eighteen-hole course at Griffith Park. He expects his golfing to get him in excellent condition for the summer season of basketball and baseball.

She was about seven years old, golden-haired and blue-eyed, she made a pretty picture as she sat on the steps of her home in the South End this morning, crooning to her doll despite the chill in the air. She sang some thing soft and low, a lullaby probably, smiling pensively when asked to sing. And all unconscious of their presence, she crooned:

"I got the blues, I got the blues."

Some Plain Truths Expressed in Plain American Language

Sunday papers of December 28 carried this London dispatch:

London, Dec. 27.
Premier Lloyd George, speaking in Wales today, defended the voting arrangements of the League of Nations. He said that Australia lost as many men as the United States in the war and had as much right to vote as the United States. This vote, however, he added, would not be used on any question arising between Great Britain and the United States. He went on:

"President Wilson recognized the justice and fairness of the claim put forward in behalf of the British Empire." The Premier recounted the fight in the United States on the treaty, which he termed "the folly of America entering upon party warfare when trying to settle the difficulties and troubles ensuing from the great war."

British insolence seems to be increasing since the President ordered the American flag hauled down and the British flag run up over the ships Germany surrendered to us.

The American people are putting up with a great deal, waiting for election day to come. But when a foreigner presumes to lecture our people and our Senate upon their political conduct and to assign the United States to the relative standing of a British colony, patience ends—with us, at least.

We will tell Mr. Lloyd George a few things he needs to be told.

Australia is a part of the British Empire. It had no real choice between neutrality and war when the Imperial Government declared war upon Germany and the German Government declared war upon the British Empire.

The comparison of a British colony and the free and independent United States is an insolent assumption that we stand upon the same footing as one of the British colonies.

There are a few hybrids living in the United States who take that view, we admit. But it is not the view of most Americans. Neither will it ever be the view of most Americans.

The sovereign United States was never bound to fight in England's behalf. It did so of its own free will.

The British Colonial States share in the immense loot which England carried home from the war. They were as much interested in destroying German naval power and German trade competition as was England.

The United States entered the war with the expectation of getting no gain, and certainly not that expectation. Our money and our naval and military forces saved Australia just as surely as they saved England from a disastrous defeat. We asked no indemnities and no territories for our rescue work. But we certainly object to the proposal that we shall surrender OUR OWN sovereignty to England and assume the standing of an English colony, because our expenditure of wealth and lives has insured to England that domination of the world which was SUPPOSED to be Germany's aim.

If we had not gone to England's rescue, Australia would have shared England's defeat. Australia had as much to fear from German victory as did England.

The United States can defend itself against any Power or combination of Powers. We never feared England or Germany, and we will never see the day when we cannot protect ourselves against the attack of either or both.

If Mr. Lloyd George has coaxed himself into believing the nonsense repeated here at home by shamless hybrids, that the British fleet defended America from Germany, he has less sense than we have been accustomed to attribute to him.

When one of our hybrid Anglophiles utters such stuff it is merely a token that a brainless bootlicker is speaking.

But when the Prime Minister of Great Britain publicly assumes that we owe England any gratitude, instead of England owing her escape from defeat to US, and assumes that a right struggle among the nations is that of a British dominion colony, what is more shameless toying in an American citizen's mouth becomes insulting insolence in a British Premier's mouth.

It occurs to us that Mr. Lloyd George has ought to do at present in attending to British parliamentary affairs without going out of his way to instruct the Senate of the United States and the people of the United States as to THEIR OBLIGATIONS TO THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

We trust that Mr. Lloyd George's candid exposition of the British Government's opinion of America and attitude toward America will have the good effect it ought to have here at home.

We hope there is no Senator so wholly lost to every right feeling of national pride that he will now consent to have our country ranked with one of the British colonies by a formal treaty agreement.

We are glad that Mr. George, in a moment of inattention, let the cat out of the bag.

Usually he is the typical British statesman, as clever as unscrupulous, and seldom saying what is really in the back of his head.

But this time caution and cleverness went momentarily by the board, and Mr. George got the applause of a British political gathering by expressing real British opinion of the American nation, of the part played in the war by the American people, and of America's rightful position as a subsidiary and undertrapper of the British Empire.

In a measure it is our own fault that this insolent and contemptuous opinion prevails in England.

During the war hysteria a certain breed of Americans vied in outdoing each other in the most disgusting sycophancy toward everybody and everything British.

Even our own history was falsified, the heroic deeds and the admirable wisdom of our fathers minimized, the other peoples of Europe grossly and brutally maligned, the insolence and ugly aggression of British navalism condoned, and the British flag hung out on public and private buildings on a level with or above our own Stars and Stripes.

This excess of slavish adulation—worthy only of a gathering of the Pilgrim Society—naturally deceived British observers.

They came to look upon us all as being as servile as the hybrids who kow-towed before the Union Jack.

And the humiliating thing, above all else, is that even in the White House and in the House of Congress the same servile adulation of everything British not only went unrebuked, but was actually the means whereby cheap demagogues obtained applause for the moment.

But that day of humiliation is past, thank God!

The servant of the American people, whether in the White House or in the Congress, who thinks he will gain applause by doffing his hat and bending his knee to British insolence, will very soon find out that the American people have had enough, and too much, of that sort of thing.

The whole nation is tired of throwing millions after millions into the hate of these ungrateful European governments, whining for our money and laughing in our faces when they have it; is tired of having the gigantic efforts by which we saved the Entente from the ignominy of being whipped by a much smaller nation belittled and contemptuously sneered at; is tired, to put it all in one short sentence, of Europe and its governments and statesmen and unscrupulous and ungrateful diplomacy.

We say to you men who hold our commissions in the Senate that not two in ten of us plain American folks want these covenants of alliance with England and France and Italy ratified, or the treaty made at Paris ratified.

We want the great American privilege of running American affairs to suit ourselves.

We have had enough of England, enough of France, enough of Europe.

Let them settle their own troubles.

They made them.

There never was a day when they could not have avoided war if they had wanted to do so. There was no reason at all why Europe could not have kept the peace if the rulers in Berlin, Vienna, Petrograd, Paris, Rome and London had ceased their constant intrigues against each other and their constant plots to aggrandize themselves by robbing their neighbors. They were all tarred with the same stick.

They all whined the same hypocritical, the same accusations against the others, the same excuses for their own conduct, the same sentimental lies about their holy motives. And they were all international burglars and gunmen together. AND, MOREOVER, THEY HAVE NOT CHANGED THEIR NATURES OR THEIR METHODS.

What they were in January, 1914, they are in January, 1920, and will continue to be.

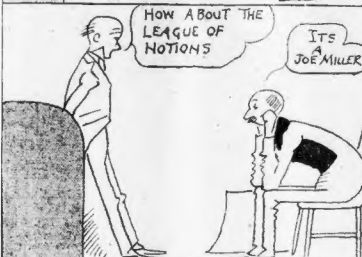

Now, whatever our national faults may be, lying and hypocrisy are not among them; and whenever our representatives begin to play the game of diplomacy with these trained and expert international liars and looters they will be as completely bamboozled and as completely skinned as was the unsophisticated and self-confident Mr. Wilson.

Our only security is in staying out of a game that we are too decent and too honest to play with any hope of winning.

WHAT HAVE YOU GOT FOR TOMORROW'S PAPER?

HOW ABOUT A PICTURE ON WOODALCOHOL?

Comrades of Major Lee Will Mourn His Loss Deeply

Every boy who served overseas in the 51st Brigade, composed of the 101st and the 102nd Infantry, 26th Division, will mourn the death of Major "Chris" Lee. To many of the boys he had been a teacher and an adviser; to most of them he had been a sustaining influence in trying times, and by all of them he was admired and loved for his gallantry and valor in action.

Surely, Major Lee made the supreme sacrifice. Desperately wounded in the Argonne fighting he bore his sufferings with great fortitude. No degree of pain could drive away his smile or tinge the sweetness of his disposition. Quiet, unassuming, sincere and truly religious, considerate and courageous—there you have "Chris" Lee, real man among men, real soldier among soldiers.

The news of the death of his wife while he was a shrapnel wreck in a French hospital was the most desperate wound of the many he received. It was the one wound beyond the skill of surgery, for it was deep down in his great heart. It was his ideal, so far as he was concerned, her death, following a strenuous home service campaign for soldiers' families, was the great sacrifice.

Says one of the boys who wiped out German machine gun nests with him: "He was white. He led and never trailed us. He tried to keep us clean, our souls as well as bodies. No man could forget wife or mother who served under him." It is given to but few men to receive such a tribute. Cited six times for extraordinary heroism, he wore none of the medals or crosses conferred upon him by the French and his own government. He gave a score of years to military service and met every test with credit to himself and the Boston of which he was proud. So let us half-staff our flags as a mark of respect to him today.

Letters to the Editor

Editor Boston American:
As a patient in the Parker Hill Hospital, I read your several editorials on the rehabilitation of disabled soldiers that were being given by the Federal Board and the show methods which they were then using. I now have the pleasure of informing you that the show you gave them did some of us fellows much good, for when they awakened on the job they injected new life into their efforts and we got results not obtained before.

Bulletin No. 1, or any of the other numerous bulletins that are handed to a soldier while he lies in the hospital, said how good the boys are being looked after. I wish you could know what we are really getting in the bulletin you read that all books, supplies, etc., are given the disabled men. "General Orders" discontinue with the red tape we have to go through to secure the supplies.

It is all due to incompetency on the part of those that have the handling of this affair, and I am sure that if it was presented to the public in such a way that it would become an issue in the Congress we would be better cared for. It is my personal opinion that if the men who made this training possible knew the difficulties we are having they would jump on some one's neck.

Knowing that your valuable paper is the only one that will, has in mind the services of the men, I ask you to give this space in your columns, and I can assure you that the 150 men at this school will appreciate it very much. Only a few of us are left in a condition that we are able to fight for our rights, so we find it necessary to call on some one that we know can get results for us.

HON. JOSEPHUS Daniels, SECRETARY OF THE NAVY, WASHINGTON, D. C.
MY DEAR Josephus, A FEW days ago, I READ in the paper, ABOUT AN admiral, WHO WOULDN'T accept, SOME SORT of a medal, BECAUSE HE believed, HE WAS entitled, TO SOMETHING better, AND I want to tell you, ABOUT A woman, I HAPPEN to know, WHO WAS possessed, OF AN only son, WHO SUPPORTED her, AND WHEN the war came, HE STAYED at home, FOR QUITE a while, BUT HIS mother saw, THAT HE pined to go, AND SO one night, WHEN DINNER was done, AND THE dishes washed, SHE SAT with him, AND THEY talked it over, AND SHE told him then, THAT SHE believed, HE OUGHT to go, AND THAT she could work, WHILE HE was gone, AND SHE held her tears UNTIL THE day, WHEN HE went away, IN THE day blue, AND HE WAS one, THAT YOU sent away, IN A little boat, FAR INTO the North, INTO WINTRY seas, WHERE GALLANT men, SWEPT WIDE on mile.

FOR DEADLY mines, AND SHE didn't know AS NO one knew, WHERE HE had gone, AND EVERY day, BACK HERE at home, SHE DID her work, AND WATCHED the mails, AND MONTIE went by, AND THEN one day, A MESSAGE came, AND ON that night, WITH TREMBLING hands, SHE FOLDED away, IN HIS little room, THE WAITING clothes, THAT SHE kept for him, AND EVER since then, ON EVERY day, SHE HAS gazed her way, TO HER daily oil, BUT HAS dared to watch, WHAT THE mails might bring, AND I want to suggest, THAT IF it should be, THAT SOME admiral, IS DISAPPOINTED, WITH THE sort of medal, YOU'VE AWARDED him, THAT YOU might find a way, OF PASSING it on, TO THIS only woman, WHO GAVE her son.

HOW BOSTON CARES FOR THOSE IN NEED

By Randolph Wellford Smith

I KNOW an Armenian fruit vendor, a youth with a sweet wife and two little children. They live in a modest little apartment on Harrison avenue, not far from the Catholic Cathedral. The youth, for he is little more, earns from $20 to $25 per week, his profit being largely dependent upon the weather. Their actual living expenses, including rent, food and clothes, are kept down to $11.50 a week. How, they do it, God knows—I don't! The remainder of his entire earnings are sent to his fellow countrymen, who, as all the world now knows, are starving by the thousands. I understand this is not an exceptional case. As a nation they are notably tender hearted and extremely charitable.

Are Sent Home

One Armenian told me that he would stake his life that half of the total earnings of his people in this country were being sent home. Certainly that is a remarkable showing.

Undoubtedly many of these people because of their drastic self sacrifice will fall victims to disease during the long winter months and the cold New England spring. They should be cared for.

"So many Greeks and Italians are going home," said a charity worker, "that I doubt if our laborers will be so imperative for the next little while. We have lost an enormous foreign population since the armistice."

A careful survey of the field does not indicate the verity of this statement. So far as I am able to ascertain, for every Greek and Italian who has gone home to spend their war earnings, some other foreigner has stepped into his shoes here in Boston.

No Difference on Surface

There is no appreciable difference in the foreign population on the surface. If anything, the reverse is true. The West End, which is populous with many people from all over the globe, has few vacant places of abode. The same congestion is apparent and the same human ills and ailments and suffering are to be met as of yore.

Every student and co-worker is approaching the new problem—the after-war problem—with not increased interest and trite hope and integral confidence of results. The greatest evil that the charity worker and the philanthropist has had to deal with is no longer a menace. After January the 16th whatever may be the idea and thought of the dastardly thief and the brewer, this whole land will be removed of the direct cause of 95 per cent of the human suffering in the world.

WHEN PARENTS WORK WITH TEACHERS

Your children have resumed their school duties and you are beginning to hear the same old tales of favoritism and injustice practiced by the kiddie teachers. Don't be foolish enough to believe this nonsense. Don't blame "teachers" because the boy or the girl has to stay at school. Any child will put up a defense, and any child—just as with many adults—is slow to see its own faults.

In the reports which come to you each month you have a pretty fair average of your child's ability as shown to the teacher. If you want the marks higher you must help the teacher to interest the child enough to get results.

If your youngster is one thing at home and another in the school, investigate. Have a friendly talk with those who are trying to point the way to knowledge and find out how you and "teacher" can work together for the good of the child. If your child is wasting time in school, find it out and put a stop to it. Don't complain of favoritism and injustice.
